

English translation of Inuktitut comments from the Letters from Public Meeting held in Pond Inlet
Received 2 May 2013

Baffin Island is full of wildlife that are abundant, to do a seismic testing would be very dangerous to our wildlife. Especially including all the various marine mammals, such as different kinds of seals, whales. Since it is the ocean the acoustics under water are many times louder than being in the air outside of water. My husband knows for he has seen seals with bleeding ears, and he has seen seals that are deaf to outboard motors, that what we have been seeing. Seismic testing if also very dangerous to other smaller wildlife and organisms such as scalpins, shrimps, krills and other vertebrae, I know this because my husband is a hunter himself and he report what he had seen every time, and we sustain from wildlife.

I would be able to agree to seismic testing now, but only after twenty five years have passed.

It is crazy because we need narwhal for food and we need them to live, for living, and we need them to see people hunt too.

Myrah Peterloosie

No for seismic testing because of the marine mammals original signed

There is to be no seismic testing on or near Davis Straight- Lancaster Sound.
